DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim 19 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Pearson et al (5769858). Pearson shows in figure 10 how the distal portion expands (i.e. opens up, unfolds, increases in extent, such as from “A” to “B”) and shows in figures 14 and 15 the actuator and elongated proximal portion having a compacted first configuration (e.g. figure 14) and a straight second configuration (e.g. figure 15) that is constrainable since the second configuration is rotated/forced into the second configuration to expand the distal portion. In addition, the second configuration is capable of having a “medical device” passed over it since the limitations of the medical device have not been set forth and are a relative size.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 20 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Pearson et al.

Pearson discloses the claimed invention except for advancing a cannula over the proximal portion and into the vessel to separate tissue from the lead. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the lead removal system and method as taught by Pearson, with advancing a cannula over the proximal portion and into the vessel to separate tissue from the lead since it was known in the art that lead removal systems and methods use the advancing of a cannula over the proximal portion and into the vessel to separate tissue from the lead in order for the lead to be easily removed from the patient with less force and therefore reducing the likelihood of breaking the lead in the body.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Shipko is one example of many showing the use of a cannula to separate tissue from the lead.
